Brief Career History:

Sean J Glassberg has nearly thirty years of academic and professional experience, ranging from teaching English and serving as a Director of Faculty Development and Instructional Designer at community and technical colleges and universities to training industry and technical professionals to become educators. Born into a family of educators - his father, grandfather, and grandmother are retired teachers, and his brother, sister, sister-in-law and wife are all teachers – Sean possesses a solid foundation of best teaching practices, and his Master's degree in Special Education and work with children with disabilities have enabled Sean to respond to the wide spectrum of learners in our classrooms. He currently serves as an Instructional Designer for Phoenix College in the Maricopa County Community College System and teaches English at The Citadel in Charleston, South Carolina. His firm, Educator Training & Consulting, was established in 2003 and has been contracted to deliver faculty-training sessions at community and technical colleges across the United States. His passion to help others, in and outside of classroom, led him to found Racers for Pacers, a non-profit organization with a mission to include children with disabilities in the running community.

Sean lives in Mount Pleasant, South Carolina, with his wife, four children, and his best friend, Atticus, a two-year old Greater Swiss Mountain Dog.
